Benefits of compliance inspections

Any building work on the property that does not have an associated approval has the potential to impact on future property transactions or may affect property insurance claims. There can be no guarantee that building work, which has not been properly certified (assessed and inspected at relevant stages), has been built properly and will not cause future problems.

It is becoming more prevalent for special conditions relating to building approvals to be incorporated into property contracts and as a consequence a council compliance inspection may be requested.

Terms and conditions:

For all relocatable home, domestic and commercial compliance inspections, it is understood and agreed:

- The resident/occupant will be advised by the applicant that the inspection will be conducted by council. It is acknowledged that for a compliance inspection, written advice will be provided only in relation to existing building work on the property and whether that building work has an associated building development approval and/or requires approval because it is assessable development.
  - Further, the advice will not include:
    - Confirmation of compliance with the Building Code of Australia (BCA);
    - The identification of building defects or structural adequacy (whether concealed or otherwise);
    - Confirmation of the property boundaries and the position of any building work in relation to boundaries;
    - Whether there is timber pest infestation or adequate protection for such infestation; or
    - Confirmation as to whether a swimming pool fence that may be located on the property complies with the relevant pool fencing standard.
  - It is acknowledged that a compliance inspection will not finalise a current or lapsed building development approval.
  - It is acknowledged that a reinspection fee may be levied in the event access is not made available because the resident/occupant has not provided access as arranged by mutual agreement.
  - It is acknowledged that for a compliance inspection, council will require a building development approval and resultant final inspection certificate to be obtained for any building work identified at the time of inspection as assessable building work and that does not have approval. Alternatively, the requirement shall be to remove or demolish the building work.
